RCMP have identified the man found dead in a field off of Gellatly and Carrington roads on Westbank First Nation Land. Police and the Coroner Service attended and confirmed the body of 44-year-old David Thomas McLaughlan inside a tent at the location just after 1:45 p.m. Monday. Foul play is not suspected. McLaughlan had been staying in a tent at that location for about a month and had been living without a home. Police say friends of the deceased had attended the location to do a wellness check when they discovered the body. They had dinner with him on Saturday evening. McLaughlan is known to police and has a criminal history. The BC Coroners Service will investigate the cause of death.
